Instructions: In a democracy the power of government is vested in the people. Citizens decide who will serve as their representatives in government by voting in local, state and national elections. In this activity you will identify who represents you at each level of government. When you complete the exercise you may email it to the Girls in Politics Initiative™ team to be checked for accuracy.

In the United States geography is the basis for determining representation. You will use your address of primary residence to answer the questions in this exercise. For your research you may use whatever resources are available to you including but not limited to the Internet.

Note: Answer the questions that pertain to you. Not everyone lives in a city and is represented by a mayor or city council.
